CLASS NOTES

LETTER TO ALUMNI

WINTER 02-03

This issue of the Community contains the annual report on fundraising for the past fiscal year, and thus my letter also sets out some highlights from the more extensive Annual Report that I presented to the Board of Directors at its September meeting. In particular, I want to share with you efforts in four general areas. But I offer this summary noting that there is no way to adequately capture all of the excellent efforts and achievements that have occurred in these and other areas, and necessarily the successful pursuit of our mission occurs only because of the many individuals who "make it happen."

THE ACADEMIC PROGRAM

Any discussion of the Academic Program must begin with news about the faculty. Two important additions were made to the faculty this past year. We were very pleased to hire Assistant Professor Robin Feldman, who will teach in the property and intellectual property fields, and Distinguished Professor John Leshy, who will add important strength to our environmental law program. Sadly, I also must report the deaths of two of our emeriti faculty, Professor Howard Downs and Professor Vivian Wilson. Both taught for many years at Hastings and, although they had been retired for some time, they will be remembered fondly by large numbers of our alumni.

The faculty's scholarly and public service record remains outstanding, as illustrated in the regular listings that appear in the Faculty Notes section of each issue of this magazine. I simply will note here the high volume of their scholarly publications. During 2001-02, Hastings faculty members published 33 books, 8 book chapters, 26 book supplements, 26 law review articles, 13 articles for online journals, and 4 book reviews or commentaries. They also delivered some 86 speeches or papers and served as moderators or panelists at 30 different meetings or conferences. It is an outstanding record, indeed.

On the curricular front, the Academic Standards Committee completed its five-year Bar Passage Study, including presentations at both a faculty and a Board of Directors retreat, and the faculty adopted a series of recommended changes for the academic standards and for admissions processing, which will be implemented this year.

Additionally, the Moot Court program once again achieved some outstanding successes. The highlight of the year was when the Hastings team won our first-ever National Moot Court Championship. This is the oldest, largest, and most prestigious of the competitions and Hastings placed Number One in front of some 191 teams from 130 law schools throughout the country!

The College also hosted a series of excellent conferences and symposia on a wide array of topics. These included some six symposia sponsored by our scholarly journals. Those papers will be published in upcoming issues. The fifth annual conference sponsored by the Hastings Public Law Research Institute in conjunction with the League of California Cities Municipal Law Institute also was held.

The proceedings of that conference, which was entitled "Privatization: The Legal Implications of the Shifting Boundaries Between Public and Private," have been posted on the Institute's website.

SUPPORT SERVICES

Without a doubt, the biggest and most exciting challenge for the Admissions department this past year was the dramatic 26% increase in our applications, from 4,800 to 6,059. The numbers of students visiting the campus and participating in various special programs designed to introduce them to the College also was greater. All of these increased numbers necessarily created a great deal of additional work. But with the dedication of the staff and the hard work of our faculty/student committees, all applications were reviewed and processed. By any standard it has been an extraordinary year.

The Financial Aid department also had a banner year, completing several initiatives to increase the ease and quickness of delivering financial aid. Loan certifications are now done entirely electronically; the scholarship process timeline was moved from spring to fall, thereby decreasing borrowing and increasing student morale; PICAP payments to our public interest graduates were begun on a contemporaneous basis, easing the stress for those graduates in making loan payments; and financial aid award notices to continuing students were made in May so that most continuing students were able to leave for the summer knowing their financial aid for the next year was in order.

The Career Services department had a very challenging year confronting a difficult legal market in which there was a major downturn in hiring in all categories. The department ran a full calendar of 54 different career development programs, with 31 of those including outside speakers — predominantly Hastings alumni — as guest presenters and expanded its outreach to small and mid-size firms. In addition to the many Hastings alumni who volunteer to serve in our career services programs, our alumni/mentor program continues to grow. This year an additional 70 alumni were recruited to mentor Hastings students, bringing the total mentor pool to above 500. A new showcase event, the Public Interest Graduation, also was launched to honor the many ways in which students demonstrate a public service commitment. It was a highly visible success, with over 100 students, parents, friends, and faculty in attendance. All of these outreach and programming efforts were most positive and remain an important base for the program.

The Student Services office supervised the introduction of two new and extremely successful programs. The first was the Hastings Tenderloin Tutoring Program, under which 15 students tutored over 900 hours at the After School Program at the Tenderloin Neighborhood Development Center. Second, the office helped to revive the VITA Program on campus, providing tax assistance to low income and elderly members of the Tenderloin community. Twenty-two students completed the necessary training and IRS exam, and they served some 90 taxpayers and their families, working two nights a week for eight weeks.

Finally, let me note some of the new initiatives undertaken by our Technology Services department. These included installing wireless network connections in the Library and the Dining Commons to experiment with that method of expanding student computer access at a low cost; and adding several new departmental, program, and faculty Web pages, with 30 faculty actively using Web pages that cover some 56 courses and the addition of several new department and program webs. Computer Support Services also installed new portable classroom equipment, training several faculty and staff in how to use the equipment to offer computer presentations. It also oversaw the technical side of all computer examinations, reporting that in the spring term 59% of all students took their exams on computer, with 75.6% of the first-year students doing so.

CAMPUS ENVIRONMENT

The primary focus of capital planning this year was on the proposal to build a multistory garage on the Golden Gate/Larkin property and upgrade McAllister Tower for seismic and fire-life safety purposes, adding 80 new housing units there. The EIR process was completed in April; however, at a request from the neighborhood community, the Board delayed its ultimate approval until June to allow additional time to see whether a multi-use facility, including housing, would be feasible on that site and yet meet the College's objectives. The information that emerged did not reveal any viable alternative, and the Board voted to approve the original project on June 7, after having to reconvene the meeting when it was disrupted by protesters. As a result of a subsequent demand by State Senator Burton that the Board rescind its action or lose its entire State appropriation, the Board held a special meeting on June 26 and rescinded that decision, voting to establish a five-person Blue Ribbon Commission to advise it of what alternatives might exist that would be acceptable to the neighborhood, while at the same time being financially feasible and directly supportive of the College's mission. Any determination with regard to possible development of the property will await the report of the Blue Ribbon Commission to see what fruitful ideas may emerge from that process.

ALUMNI AND PUBLIC RELATIONS

Alumni Relations presented some 46 programs, attended by over 3,500 alumni, students, faculty, and friends. These included some 23 events sponsored by our 13 active alumni chapters, four receptions in cities where there are no chapters — Boston, Chicago, Santa Barbara, and San Jose — and numerous student receptions and awards ceremonies. In addition to these activities, the office contracted with Harris Publishing to produce a new Alumni Directory.

The Public Affairs Department completed two special publication projects this year: a Faculty Profile book with pictures and short bios on all the full-time faculty and a suite of materials, including a full admissions book, for the new LL.M. in U.S. Legal Studies that is being offered in fall 2002. The office also responded to some 225 media inquiries for faculty experts on various topics, including the 9/11 World Trade Center disaster and its aftermath, the Whipple dog-mauling case, the Gary Condit investigation, the California Supreme Court case concerning whether Ghilotti should be released from a mental hospital, and the conflict between federal and state laws on medical marijuana, to name a few. It was a very busy year.

CONCLUSION

2001-02 has been a challenging and sometimes frightening year. The events of September 11 created enormous concern and anxiety about how we as a law school and as lawyers ought to respond, with the faculty beginning the dialogue with a panel on terrorism presented to a standing-room-only crowd the following week. The State energy and fiscal crisis created additional pressures and concerns about how to respond to our ever-growing needs with shrinking support. The efforts spent on trying to develop an appropriate plan for the development of our property were time-consuming and ended up unfulfilled. Despite these pressures, what seems most apparent when reviewing all that transpired in the College is how we kept moving forward and how much was accomplished successfully. The difficult issues we tackled "head on." The staff pulled together to make sure that all of our services continued uninterrupted and, indeed, were improved despite shortages. And the faculty continued to provide excellent classroom instruction, scholarship, and public service to advance law reform, as well as understanding about the role of law in the complex world in which we live. These achievements and responses speak for themselves and attest to the continuing strength of this institution.

CAMPUS NOTES

Computer Firsts

If you have visited the Hastings campus recently, you may have noticed a phenomenon that is growing almost monthly. It seems that we are awash in a sea of student computers. In the most recent survey of incoming students, more than 80% were arriving at school with notebook computers. Many more purchase computers once they start classes. Eric Noble, the Director of Information Technology at Hastings, discusses factors propelling this trend.

As part of the renovation of Snodgrass Hall (which re-opened for the fall 2000 semester), the College installed electrical outlets for computer users at the desktops in all classrooms. Students can now use their notebook computers without worrying about their batteries dying. Consequently, says Noble, 50% to 75% of students in any single class are using computers to take notes. "At least that's what we hope they are doing!" he adds.

Another trend feeding notebook computer use is computer exams. Hastings was the first law school (in fall 1995) to allow the use of computers for taking final exams. The College uses special, secure exam software produced by Examsoft, Inc. (founded by Hastings alumni Adam Wasserman and Greg Sarab, who graduated in 1995). In spring 2002, 59% of Hastings students took their exams using Examsoft software running on their notebook computers. In fall 2003, Noble projects that 70 to 80% of students will take every exam on computer.

Finally, Internet access on campus is another reason for the increased presence of notebook computers. Hastings installed more than 300 wired Internet access ports in the Gold Reading Room, Classroom A, and other locations as part of the Snodgrass Hall renovation. Then, after a pilot project in spring 2002, Noble installed the first wireless network at Hastings, providing wireless Internet access in all student study areas, including Law Library study carrels, the Law Cafe, classrooms, reading rooms, and student lounges. "Student response to the wireless network has been tremendous," Noble reports. "It means students are not tied down to a cable or a network port in a wall. They can find a favorite out-of-the-way location and continue to use their computers to access Lexis or Westlaw or read their e-mail. They love it."

JUSTICE MING CHIN, JOHN DEAN HIGHLIGHT PLRI ETHICS CONFERENCE

Chancellor Mary Kay Kane, California Supreme Court Justice Ming Chin, Professor Francis Walsh, under whom Justice Chin studied, and Professor David Jung, Director of the Public Law Research Institute, gather before Justice Chin's address at a September 20 PLRI conference, "Public Lawyers and the Public Interest: Do Local Government Lawyers Have Special Ethical Obligations?"

"What If Deep Throat Was a Lawyer?" Watergate player John Dean asked in his luncheon address.

Panelists included, standing, Buck Delventhal ('69), San Francisco Chief Deputy City Attorney; San Mateo Superior Court Judge Quentin Kopp, and Berkeley City Attorney Manuela Albuquerque ('75); and, seated, Professor Steve Berenson of Thomas Jefferson School of Law in San Diego; University of Pennsylvania Trustee Professor of Law Geoffrey C. Hazard, Jr.; and Fresno City Attorney Hilda Cantu Montoy.

Campus Speakers

FEDERALISM AND MEDICINAL MARIJUANA

On September 25, the Student Division of the Federalist Society hosted guest speakers on the implications for the doctrine of federalism and drug use policy, in light of the federal injunction against the enforcement of Proposition 215's legalization of medicinal marijuana in California. Commenting were Taylor S. Carey, left, California Special Assistant Attorney General, and constitutional scholar Roger Pilon of the Cato Institute, Washington, D.C.

"A PERSONAL MATTER"

Hastings' Asian Pacific American Law Student Association was among sponsors of an October 3 talk by Gordon Hirabayashi, who challenged the Japanese curfew and exclusion order during World War II, in 1987 winning a reversal of his conviction. A film entitled "A Personal Matter: Gordon Hirabayashi v. U.S." also was screened. Pictured with Hirabayashi, center, are 2004 classmates and APALSA members Kavita Tekchandani, Mariko Nakanishi, Hongvilay Thongsamouth, and Kajin Asano.

Probing Legal Issues Of a War With Iraq

International, constitutional, and political issues surrounding a possible U.S. war on Iraq were explored October 2 by faculty panelists Professors George Bisharat, Joel Paul, Calvin Massey, and Naomi Roht-Arriaza, at podium. At an earlier panel, "Life During Wartime," held on September 11, 2002, Professors Vikram Amar and David Faigman, and Resident Scholar Karen Musalo addressed societal and governmental reactions to various issues raised during the past year in response to the World Trade Center attack.

Coffee, Tea, or Milk?

Andy Bae, Aaron Bleharski, and Dianna Jou attended one of five first-year section breakfasts in the Hervey Skyroom atop 100 McAllister Tower in September. The Student Services Office hosts this opportunity for new students to socialize in a more relaxed, post-orientation setting.

Court Watchers

The annual Supreme Court Review took place in October when Professors Rory Little, Radhika Rao, Ash Bhagwat, and Vik Amar discussed cases from the Court's most recent term and previewed important cases on this year's docket.

Campus Speakers

HASTINGS-HAITI PARTNERSHIP

Fr. Jomanas Eustache, Director of the École Supérieure Catholique de Droit de Jérémie, Hastings' partner law school in Haiti, spoke October 16 on the current situation in Haiti and how the partnership is working toward developing the rule of law in Haiti's transition to democracy.

ADACHI KEYNOTES

San Francisco Public Defender Jeff Adachi ('85) keynoted Alternative Law Day at Hastings, a series of panels of practicing attorneys discussing substantive and practical issues of their work. The October 5 event was sponsored by National Lawyers Guild student chapters at Hastings and six other Bay Area law schools. Adachi, pictured at center, is surrounded by members of the Guild's student chapter.

IN MEMORIAM

HON. BLAINE E. PETTITT 1916 - 2002

Former Board of Directors member Blaine E. Pettitt died September 21, 2002, at his home in Fresno. Appointed to Hastings' Board of Directors in 1990 by then-Gov. George Deukmejian, he had only recently completed a 12-year term on the Board, stepping down in September. On September 6, he attended his last Board meeting from his sick bed, his presence by phone assuring a quorum.

Chancellor Kane summed up her and the Hastings Board's great respect for Judge Pettitt with the following observation: "Blaine Pettitt was one of the most honorable and principled men I have ever known. Always prepared and thoughtful, he was not afraid to express his views, even if he knew that a majority might not agree. And he did so in a way that showed that he respected the views of those who disagreed. His always thoughtful questions and statements helped to ensure full and open examination of many of the important decisions made by the Board of Directors. We will miss him greatly."

A retired Fresno County Superior Court Judge, he was appointed to the Court in 1970 by then-Gov. Ronald Reagan and remained on the bench until his retirement in 1985. His colleagues knew his courtroom for its dignity, honor, civility, and strength. He was active in the Republican Party for most of his life, in 1996 receiving the Fresno County Republican Committee's Lincoln Award, which cited him as "tough, but compassionate; old-fashioned, but young at heart; humble, but secure in who he is; quiet, but strong. A true statesman." Before his death, the Fresno County Young Lawyers Association voted to honor him by designating its Mentor Award the Judge Blaine Pettitt Mentor Award.

Shortly after graduating from Hastings in 1941, he entered the Army Air Force, spending the next four years in the service, including a year working in counterintelligence. Following World War II, after a brief stint in the District Attorney's office, he was in private practice with the Fresno firm of Pettitt, Blumberg & Sherr from 1948 until his appointment to the bench. After his retirement, he continued to hear cases as a referee and taught state classes for newly appointed judges.

WELCOMING THE INAUGURAL CLASS

17 INTERNATIONAL LAWYERS

ENTER HASTINGS' LL.M. PROGRAM IN U.S. LEGAL STUDIES

From the British Isles to the Balkans, across Europe to the Far East, Hastings has gathered its first group of students to pursue the College's new LL.M. in U.S. Legal Studies.

In planning for several years, the program is a one-year Master of Laws for international students who previously have been licensed to practice law in a country outside of the United States.

Be prepared for an intellectual challenge," Professor Joel R. Paul, the program's Director, told the group at the first orientation meeting. Seventeen young lawyers sat around a conference table looking a bit apprehensive. "We don't teach rules; we teach you to question the rules, to make arguments, to think creatively." The students listened attentively. "Not only will you have to study and take exams in a foreign language about a foreign legal system and participate in class regularly, but you must abandon your comfortable assumptions about the nature of law."

Beginning in mid-August, a week-long orientation acquainted the LL.M. students with everything they needed to know about the College — rounded out with lunches with the Chancellor and with the Academic Dean, and faculty talks on the common law, separation of powers, the legal profession in the United States, congressional powers, the Socratic method, federalism, American legal realism, and the power of judicial review.

In between the faculty talks, students were introduced to the student journal editors, who invited them to join the law journals. They were welcomed by the faculty at a champagne and chocolate reception. The first evening, a bit exhausted after a long day of meetings and some jet lag, they took a ferry to Sausalito, where they had dinner with the international law faculty at Professor Paul's home. Later in the week, they attended a trial and discussed their observations of the procedure afterward with the judge. They also toured San Francisco and visited Alcatraz.

"The LL.M. program will benefit both foreign and JD students," Professor Paul explained. "The international students broaden and enrich the educational experience Hastings offers." Professor Paul should know. Before coming to Hastings in 2000, he established the LL.M. program in U.S. Legal Studies at the University of Connecticut Law School and taught international law students at the University of Leiden in The Netherlands and at American University in Washington, D.C. "Foreign perspectives also benefit our faculty's scholarship," he added.

To facilitate the assimilation of the international students, each LL.M. student is paired with a JD buddy who shares his or her interests. Hastings students have an opportunity to learn more about other cultures, practice a foreign language, and form lasting friendships overseas while helping LL.M. students adjust to a new environment.

The LL.M. candidates must enroll in a total of 24 units, including a legal writing and research class specially designed for them, and take at least one first-year course in the fall semester. With the exception of their legal writing class, they will be fully integrated into the JD curriculum, providing opportunities for our JD students to meet and study with the international students.

The 17 LL.M. candidates were selected from a competitive pool of applications from around the world. About 2,000 brochures and posters were mailed to universities around the globe soliciting applications. Each of the candidates had to possess a law degree from a home country, a high degree of fluency in English, and outstanding academic credentials and recommendations. Candidates were required to submit essays on legal issues in English and a statement of purpose. Many of the applicants have prior legal experience working in their own country or in the United States.

"Our hope is to continue to expand this program. We can continue to grow so long as we benefit the college's JD program," Professor Paul added.

Justyna Rostocka, a native of Poland, lives in Paris. She holds both a Bachelor's Degree in Private Law and a Masters Degree in Commercial and Tax Law from the Université Paris II-Assas, as well as a Diplôme d'Études Supérieures Spécialisées in Commercial Law from Université Paris XI-Sceaux. Before her Hastings studies, she focused on capital markets, company acquisitions, company law, and stock exchange law at Sherman & Sterling in Paris, where she plans to continue her professional career. "My U.S. experience will help me immeasurably with my work in Paris," Justyna said. From her first weeks here, she learned that legal education in the United States emphasizes the importance of facts and is intertwined with economics. The French system is based mostly on theory. "It's particularly enriching to be benefiting from both approaches," she said. Justyna has competed as a professional skier in Poland, and she is a fan of American cinema.

Philip Marx comes to Hastings from Austria, where he received a Masters in Law from the University of Innsbruck. An Austrian law degree takes four to five years of study, and the approach differs from that in the United States. "In Austria we are more focused on independent study," he said. "And the courses are taken subject-by-subject. So, for example, you would have civil procedure for two months straight, then take an examination in that topic before going on to another subject." He estimates some 60% of students fail the exams the first time around.

While at Innsbruck, Marx did an internship in Taiwan. He speaks some Mandarin in addition to German and English, and he hopes to return to Asia after his Hastings studies. His legal interests focus on international business and trade law, as well as intellectual property and patent and trademark law. An avid snowboarder, he also skydives and pilots planes.

THE JEROME HALL LECTURE

"DEFENDING LIBERTY, PURSUING JUSTICE"

The second Jerome Hall Lecture was presented September 19, 2002, by Professor Geoffrey C. Hazard, Jr., Trustee Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania and Sterling Professor of Law Emeritus at Yale. An icon in American law, Professor Hazard is a Renaissance man who wears many hats and delves deeply into an array of issues and fields. As Director of the American Law Institute from 1984 to 1999, he guided the Institute's many projects, including "The Law Governing Lawyers." In the area of the legal profession, he has written numerous articles and books and has been the reporter, a consultant, or a member of all the ABA special committees and task forces devoted to developing the ABA's model ethics code.

The ABA slogan, "Seeking Justice, Preserving Liberty," points to two dimensions of the activity of the legal profession. "Seeking justice" brings to mind concepts and political premises such as due process, equal protection, and human rights formalized in international conventions. These concepts go to the point that, in a proper, modern society, individuals should be accorded equal standing before the law.

"Preserving liberty" is more ambiguous, but it implies freedom to engage in entrepreneurial activity, not only in political and cultural matters, but in economic matters. Preserving liberty signals an approval and embrace of the economic system we call capitalism. The bar, for understandable reasons, has not quite made that linkage directly to the capitalist system, but it's fair to say that a member of the legal profession, in private conversation, would accept that relationship. It is noteworthy that the bar is not quite candid in acknowledging that the activity of lawyers consists mainly assisting in the affairs of business enterprise. The relative reticence of the organized profession finds a counterpart of more distressing character among the legal academic community, where substantial numbers are either silent, apologetic, or flatly critical of the connection between the legal profession and business enterprise.

Professor Richard Marcus, Coil Chair in Litigation, and Visiting Professor Eric Schneider ('62) chatted with Hall Lecturer Geoffrey Hazard at a reception following his speech.

The responsibilities of a business lawyer go beyond simply helping business people reduce the burden of their legal obligations. I see no reason why there should be hesitancy or apology for the fact that a large part of law practice furthers the legal interests of business enterprise. Before I develop that thought, I want to pay homage to the parallel commitment of the legal profession to the problems of ordinary folks as they encounter our political system in all its complexity.

Two components of the profession, legal aid and public defender organizations, provide important service to people who can't afford legal services. The penury of government in providing legal aid and public defenders is a continuing indictment of the government rather than of the legal profession. The legal aid component is a disgracefully small 1% — about 8,500 lawyers from a population of some 850,000. Added to that is voluntary and involuntary pro bono work provided by many lawyers. Involuntary, because many lawyers render legal services for which they cannot collect a fee.

Another sector of the bar often ignored, at least in academic writing about the profession, is lawyers who practice the kind of law advertised in the yellow pages. I have kept an eye on the evolution of the advertising of legal services, virtually prohibited 30 years ago and now pervasive to the point of being intrusive. In the content, format, and the thrust of their ads, yellow-pages lawyers have figured out what people pay attention to. They speak directly and simply about a handful of practice fields: license suspensions, bankruptcy, custody, divorce, support, personal injury, and sometimes additional areas such as criminal, traffic, DWI, and immigration. Those are the kinds of problems that ordinary folks encounter in the law. That encounter is almost always a severe shock: expensive and disorienting. About a third of our profession is devoted to providing fee-for-service responses to those needs. Providing that service always involves the distressing linkage between according to the law. They afford justice even to the people they prosecute, because they observe legal restraints reflected in the rules of procedure and evidence.

"Preserving liberty" is the ABA's word for the activity of at least half of our lawyers: representation addressed to business operations. These lawyers are not only the big law firms — the corporate bar — they also include those engaged in representation of organizations run like businesses — private bureaucracies such as universities, hospitals, and HMOs pursuing private objectives on a systematic basis, though not for profit. Both the lawyers in side of the regulatory divide is interactive, symbiotic, perhaps even dialectical.

We have not fully grasped that the Western constitutional systems seem to be about as good as mankind is capable of devising. The socialist alternative is dead. Many conventional thinkers in our country and in the academic world haven't really confronted the shocking consequence of that being so. It compels us to take much more seriously the problems of political and legal philosophy that ensue. We must not forget what we have learned: namely, production requires organization, organization requires hierarchy, and hierarchy results in inequality. We getting justice and having to pay money to get it. But dealing with the legal system takes a high level of skill and energy, and most of these lawyers have those attributes. That is how they are able to stay in business. Yet they are disparaged rather than celebrated in the academic literature.

Professors Vik Amar and Evan Lee with Hall Lecturer Geoffrey Hazard, Trustee Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Lee, right, studied under Professor Hazard at Yale, where Professor Hazard was the Sterling Professor of Law.

Another sector of the profession is the prosecutors: advocates for the system and for the vindication of victims; upholders of law and order. Conscientious prosecutors also are a source of protection for the criminal accused. Prosecutors for the most part are trying to do the right thing independent law firms and corporate practice and those in government law departments are engaged in law having to do with the activities of business enterprises. Formally, these lawyers are at loggerheads, whether they are in litigation, negotiation, or whatever. But they are working on the same legal problems, using essentially the same professional skills, applying the same technical expertise and terminology, invoking the sources of legal authority, and drawing upon the same constitutional and political culture. Many later go back into government. The relationship between lawyers on either must deal with what have long been recognized as competing considerations. So if we consider our profession for what it is and does, we then are driven to think more reflectively and in more complex terms about the role of our profession, the role of law, and the notion of justice.

Faculty Publications and Speeches

July 2001 - June 2002

Through research, scholarship, and the dissemination of new ideas, faculty members contribute to growth and change in our legal system. Our faculty's involvement in cutting-edge areas of the law and their participation in major law reform efforts mean that they bring to the classroom not only a full understanding of what the law is, but also the ability to communicate how it may be shaped for tomorrow. The scholarly activities of the faculty play an important role in maintaining Hastings' reputation as one of the leading law schools in the nation.

Hastings faculty members pursued an active scholarly agenda from July 2001 through June 2002. A sampling of their activities is provided below.

 Receives Rutter Award

Professor William Dodge was the recipient of the third Rutter Group Award for Teaching Excellence. The $7,500 award was presented at a ceremony in the Alumni Reception Center on September 10, 2002. The award was established by William A.
 Rutter of the Rutter Group, a California-based legal publisher. One of the students nominating Dodge for the award wrote, "He is the most organized, the most clear, the most impeccably prepared, with a near flawless command of the material." Said another, "I liked the class better than [the musical] 'Cats.'" "Your class was a beacon of black-letter law in the midst of confusion," said former student and ASUCH President
 Matthew Siroka ('04) at the presentation. Pictured are Chancellor Mary

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE COLLEGE

STANLEY L. BAUER BEQUEST
ENDOWS HASTINGS SCHOLARSHIPS

The late Stanley L. Bauer, a 1951 Hastings graduate, made a $100,000 bequest to the College to endow a scholarship in memory of his parents, Louis and Rachel Bauer. Mr. and Mrs. Bauer lived in Bolsa, California. As a teenager, Louis had worked as a farmhand, later becoming a clerk in the hamlet's general store. Although he continued to clerk in the store for some 35 years, in the 1930s he purchased both the store and some farm properties, as well as constructed several Mediterranean-style homes that he managed as rental properties.

After graduating from high school in 1944, Stanley Bauer enlisted in the Navy, serving both overseas and in various training programs at the end of World War II. On returning to civilian life, he took advantage of the GI Bill and earned a BA degree from UCLA, followed by a law degree from Hastings. From 1951 to 1973, he practiced with the Los Angeles firm of Parker, Milliken, Clark, O'Hara & Samuelian, where he advised individual and corporate clients and focused primarily on real estate-related transactions. After retiring in 1973, Mr. Bauer and his wife, Laverne Sagmaster, who also had been an attorney at Parker, Milliken, moved to Leucadia, California, fulfilling their long-held dream to live by the ocean.

"Stanley appreciated the stability that his parents gave to his life and wanted to recognize Hastings as an important element in the development of his career," said Dale Bauer, Stanley's brother. "The creation of these scholarships is possible because diligent people utilized education and the economic opportunities that California has historically given its citizens."

In accepting the bequest on behalf of the College, Chancellor Kane noted that Mr. Bauer's generosity in establishing the endowed scholarship was most appreciated, and that the scholarship would help make a Hastings legal education more affordable for future generations of deserving law students.

Income from the Bauer endowment fund will provide two Louis and Rachel Bauer Scholarships — one for a second- or third-year male student, and the other for a second- or third-year female student. Candidates are to be evaluated on three criteria: scholarship, financial need, and characteristics and qualities deemed desirable for an attorney.

Number of Alumni Donors At All-Time High in 2001-02

In reporting these impressive results, Hastings Chancellor Mary Kay Kane began by acknowledging the outstanding leadership provided by the National Chair for the 2001-02 Annual Campaign, Al Abramson of the Class of 1954. "Al personally ensured the success of this past year's Annual Campaign when he launched the campaign with his own most generous $250,000 donation to endow a new Distinguished Professorship for the school. Whenever we have called upon Al for help, he always has been there for us — as a Past President of the Alumni Association, as one of the lead donors providing funding for our Alumni Reception Center, as the longtime class agent for his Class of 1954, and as a faculty member for several of Hastings' continuing legal education programs. With all of his many past contributions to his alma mater, it's no wonder that he was able to stimulate so many other Hastings alumni to participate in the 2001-02 Annual Campaign, not only as contributors but as

The firmwide solicitation program initiated just five years ago registered significant gains during 2001-02. Under this program, members of various law firms containing multiple Hastings alumni encourage fellow graduates in their own firms to contribute to the Annual Campaign. When the firmwide solicitation program was first initiated, only 17 firms in San Francisco participated. This past year, some 27 firms participated, including firms located in Oakland, Palo Alto, Menlo Park, San Diego, Los Angeles, and Irvine. Chancellor Kane commended the Hastings volunteers in all the represented firms for their very successful efforts. The 2001-02 participation rate of Hastings graduates in the 27 firms reached 30%, as compared to the overall alumni participation rate of 13.1%. Moreover, five firms recorded participation rates for their graduates of 50% or greater. They were:

Palmieri Tyler Wiener Wilhelm & Waldron (Irvine)	100%
Thoits, Love, Hershberger & McLean (Palo Alto)	78%
Cooley Godward (San Diego)	75%
Townsend and Townsend and Crew (SF)	67%
Heller Ehrman White & McAuliffe (LA)	50%

100% PARTICIPATION BY GRADS AT PALMIERI TYLER

All of the Hastings grads in the Palmieri Tyler Wiener Wilhelm & Waldron firm in Irvine contributed to the 2001-02 Annual Campaign — Dennis Ghan ('77), Gary Weisberg ('87), Elise Enomoto ('99), Richard Salus ('89), and Greg Weiler ('81).

Three other firms recorded participation of more than 40%:

Hassard Bonnington (SF)	43%
Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom (LA)	43%
Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe (Menlo Park)	42%

The Hastings grads in Morrison & Foerster's San Francisco office recorded the largest number of donors, with the Hastings grads in the San Francisco offices of both Pillsbury Winthrop and Heller Ehrman White & McAuliffe tying for second-place honors in this particular category of Annual Campaign participation. Grads in Fenwick & West's Palo Alto office registered the largest overall contribution total, with the grads in Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe's Menlo Park office registering the second highest overall contribution total. The firmwide solicitation program has proved so successful during the past five years — thanks to the efforts of the school's volunteer firm representatives — that the College is planning to invite more firms to participate.

MOFO HAS LARGEST NUMBER OF GRADS DONATING

Chancellor Kane recently met with Wes Overson ('91), who is Hastings' firm representative in Morrison & Foerster's San Francisco office, to congratulate him on his firm's participation in the 2001-02 Annual Campaign.

HASTINGS 1066 FOUNDATION MEMBERSHIP AT AN ALL-TIME HIGH

Chancellor Kane praised the many continuing contributions of the Hastings 1066 Foundation. "Under the leadership of President Robert Freitas ('77) and his colleagues, Foundation membership reached an all-time high of 228 this past year, which represents a 6.5% increase compared to a year earlier. It was the third year in a row that the Foundation's membership crossed the milestone threshold of 200 donors!" In addition, this past year witnessed a threefold increase in the number of Foundation donors contributing at the $3,000 level, from the seven donors reported a year earlier to the 21 donors recorded at that level in 2001-02. During this past year, the Foundation scheduled a variety of special events for its members, including a reception and dinner party in January at the House of Hong in Honolulu, which was hosted by longtime Foundation member Cecilia Blackfield. Later in May, 1066 Foundation First Vice President Rebecca Hull ('81), who is a partner with Sedgwick, Detert, Moran & Arnold, hosted a reception for the benefit of the Foundation's members and donor prospects in the Los Angeles area. The Foundation also sponsored this past March's annual Anderson Lecture, as well as the traditional post-Lecture reception, at which Foundation members were able to visit informally with the 2002 Anderson Lecturer, former Stanford University President Gerhard Casper, who addressed a topic that turned out to be especially relevant given recent times – namely, what is the nature of citizenship in a period of increasing globalization?

STUDENT PHONATHON A SUCCESS IN 2001-02

"Our student phonathoners once again proved to be some of the College's best goodwill ambassadors," Chancellor Kane commented. "Under the direction of student phonathon leaders Bradley Marsh ('03), Leticia Sanchez ('02), and Jesse Adams ('03), this past year's phonathon generated nearly $42,000 in donations, as well as nearly 15% of the total number of donors in this past year's Annual Campaign."

Students demonstrated their support for the College in other ways this past year, as well. More than 25% of Hastings' students contributed to the 2001-02 Annual Campaign, with most donations designated either for the Ralph S. Abascal Public Interest Fellowship or for the purchase of recreational equipment to be used in the Walnut Room in McAllister Tower after the room's renovation. "The generosity of our students is especially noteworthy, particularly when you realize that the great majority are carrying heavy debts to finance their own legal educations. That these students would still make a donation to our Annual Campaign for the benefit of future students is a real tribute to their concern for others and certainly portends well for the future of the profession," Chancellor Kane observed.

NEARLY 70% OF HASTINGS FACULTY CONTRIBUTE

Chancellor Kane expressed the College's gratitude to her faculty colleagues for their continuing high level of participation in the Annual Campaign, including several who made contributions at the Hastings 1066 Foundation level. "My faculty colleagues once again came to the fore in substantial numbers to provide private support for the benefit of the College. Nearly 70% of our full-time faculty members made donations to the 2001-02 Annual Campaign. This really is an extraordinarily high level of participation, particularly when you realize that only two of our faculty members are themselves Hastings graduates. My colleagues not only offer first-rate instruction, but also make it possible for the law school to fulfill its mission through their most generous financial support."

ALUMNI CONSTITUTE OVER 80% OF DONORS

As in prior years, the great majority of the College's overall donors were alumni — 81%, or 2,093 of the 2,577 donors in 2001-02. For the fifth year in a row, alumni also were the largest single source of donations to the College, contributing nearly $900,000 of the $1,595,278 raised in 2001-02.

Chancellor Kane expressed the College's appreciation by saying: "We cannot overemphasize the importance of the private support that is provided by our alumni. At a time when the State's financial assistance has continued to decline as a percentage of our overall operating budget — and when student fees are at an all-time high — alumni donations help us maintain, indeed enhance, our high quality academic program, while keeping Hastings accessible to qualified students."

COLLABORATIVE EFFORTS OF MANY CONTRIBUTE TO CONTINUING SUCCESS

Chancellor Kane concluded her 2001-02 report of gifts by observing, "The record-breaking 2001-02 Annual Campaign is very much a shared success story. Our alumni, students, and faculty all made significant contributions to the success of this past year's campaign. In addition, many other friends of the College also have provided much appreciated support. Because of the generous help of the many members and friends of our extended Hastings community, I have the greatest confidence in the leading role that Hastings will continue to play in legal education in the years to come."

Honor Roll of Donors

July 1, 2001 - June 30, 2002

The following pages recognize Hastings' many generous donors, listing them by classes and by donor clubs, for the fiscal year July 1, 2001, to June 30, 2002. Gifts made after June 30, 2002, will be recognized in next year's annual report. If you find any errors or omissions, please contact the Office of College Relations at 200 McAllister Street, San Francisco, CA 94102. The College honors these alumni and friends whose gifts add immeasurably to the quality of legal education at Hastings. Thank you for your support.

Note: Donor Clubs are noted within each class listing as follows:

Donors at the Advocates and Counselors ($1 - $249) level are listed under each class.

Donors at the Associates ($250 - $499) level are noted with one asterisk. *

Donors at the Partners ($500 - $1,065) level are noted with two asterisks. **

Donors at the 1066 Foundation level making gifts of $1,066 or more are noted with three asterisks. ***

Donors who have contributed $1,066 or more to the College or to the Hastings 1066 Foundation also are acknowledged in an honor roll of donors by donor level, immediately following the class list of donors.

Class participation rates in the 2001-02 Annual Campaign are noted in parentheses.

CLASS NOTES

CLASS OF 1955

WILLIAM MILLER has written a book, Long Pig, a Fantasy Concerning Cannibals, Courts and Other Consumers. Miller, a partner with Pillsbury Winthrop in San Francisco and a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers, has written on a variety of subjects in the course of his legal practice. Long Pig is his first work of fiction.

CLASS OF 1958

MAYOR WILLIE BROWN was featured in a May 10, 2002, Silicon Valley Business Ink article entitled "Turning Point," in which he says that running for a seat in the California Senate in 2004 is "...a distinct possibility." The story profiled Brown's youth, education, and his 38 years as an elected public official, seven of those as San Francisco's mayor.

CLASS OF 1959

RONALD ROUDA, a partner with

Rouda, Feder, Teitjen & Zanobini in San Francisco, was awarded the San Francisco Trial Lawyers Association's Consumer Attorneys of California Lifetime Achievement Award in April 2002.

CLASS OF 1962

HON. RICHARD WEATHERSPOON of Orange County Superior Court retired from the bench in May because of back problems following a car accident last January. Judge Weatherspoon was elevated to the Superior Court by Gov. George Deukmejian in 1987.

CLASS OF 1964

JOSEPH COTCHETT, partner in the Burlingame law firm of Cotchett, Pitre, Simon & McCarthy, delivered the featured address at Cal Poly's commencement ceremonies on June 15, 2002. He also received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from the California State University Trustees.
